

What's on your mind? |

By Terri Flow

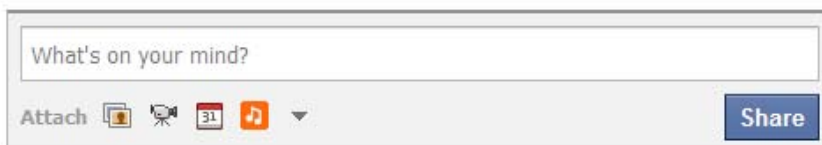

What's on your mind? This is a very interesting question in our current political times. Everyone has their opinion and they definitely want to share it. A great way to state your opinion and find out what others are thinking is to share it on Facebook.

Facebook has a feature called News Feed. Every time I log in to Facebook, I see what is on people's minds because they tell me. Some people state what they are doing, some state an opinion about a political situation and others post videos or have websites that can be viewed with important information. Facebook posts updates immediately, which allows me to review new posts all day long. Often times, I am able to find out more political news and opinions on Facebook News Feed than I do on Fox News.

News Feeds are broadcast to all your Facebook friends pages. This is a great way to spread the word about a club event or something in the political world. Many candidates are stating how events or fundraisers are going and then it is spread throughout all of their "friends". Think how influential stating what is on your mind can be by using a social networking tool!

Now this is different from "writing on someone's wall". When you write on someone's wall on Facebook, an email is sent directly to the individual's email that you wrote on their wall. This can possibly be seen by others, but it is more private between the two individuals. It is possible that what you write on someone's wall will appear in the News Feed.

Below is the box that appears on Facebook and then the icons that allow a user to add photos, videos, music, etc.

So "What is on your mind?" Start telling everyone on Facebook!
