

PREFACE TO THE SAMPLE BYLAWS

The sample bylaws in the Leadership Handbook are designed to assist new local clubs, who wish to federate with the Texas Federation of Republican Women, in the writing and adopting of their bylaws (the basic rules relating to a local club as an organization).

This sample contains all provisions required by TFRW Bylaws, Article IV, Section 2, Paragraphs A - N and are not in conflict with the Bylaws of TFRW or NFRW. The content is based on the content in the bylaws of the two superior bodies and the principles expressed in Robert's Rules of Order, Newly Revised, the adopted authority on parliamentary law of NFRW and TFRW. (Note: The New Robert's Rules of Order, edited by John Sherman, is not the one prescribed in the Bylaws).

The sample may be used by simply filling in the blanks (those instructions in parentheses) or it may be altered, except for those provisions required by the TFRW Bylaws, to meet the needs of a local club.

One copy of the bylaws adopted by the members must be forwarded with the local club's application to federate to TFRW Headquarters. The TFRW VP/Bylaws must approve them.

Although the Sample Bylaws reflect the guidelines set forth in the TFRW Bylaws, Article IV, Section 2, you should review that section for yourself to make sure you have complied with all requirements of that section of the TFRW Bylaws. Remember, those requirements are not handled as a list in the Sample Bylaws. They are in the appropriate Articles and Sections throughout the Bylaws.

Article IV, Section 4, lists all membership classifications allowed by TFRW and NFRW. You must include "Primary." You may include as many of the other classifications as your members want. Associate members are good ways to get extra money and reach additional Republicans. You may not add classifications not listed.

Article VI, Section 3, of the Sample Bylaws lists the minimum number of officers recommended. As the local club grows, its number of officers may grow also. Be sure to decide the duties of each officer, how long they will serve and the process that will be followed if a vacancy occurs.

Article IX, Standing Committees, lists the committees you are required to have and committees you may wish to have. You can add or subtract non-required committees as your club grows or its needs change. If your committees are to have powers beyond reporting, be sure those powers are enumerated in your bylaws as well as how chairmen are chosen, how long they will serve and the process your club will follow if a vacancy occurs.

Reading the TFRW and NFRW Bylaws completely through is a good idea for new presidents. The club Bylaws Chairman should always read them before beginning any review of the local club's bylaws.

TFRW no longer requires a local club to review its bylaws every two years unless the TFRW Convention and/or the NFRW Convention amend their bylaws. In those years, the local clubs will be required to revise their bylaws to comply as necessary and submit them to the Vice President-Bylaws for review and approval.

Although TFRW no longer requires a biennial review, TFRW Bylaws require that a club must submit any amendments it makes to its bylaws to the Vice President-Bylaws for approval before the change becomes effective. A local club would be well served to review its bylaws every couple of years, however, just to make sure the club is adhering to them in the conduct of their business or to identify any changes that need to be made because of changes in the club.

These sample Bylaws are also designed to assist local clubs in reviewing and amending their Bylaws. (See “Purposes and Rules for Local Club Bylaws” in the Leadership Handbook.)

Italicized phrases are instructional, and not meant to be included in the final Bylaws document. Please remove them from your Bylaws when you fill in the information.
